Summary: "I saw something dark her eyes. She stared at me, I stared back." This story follows Alex Russo, as she struggles to adjust to her new lifestyle & tries to keep her normal-well almost normal life. Expect the Unexpected.

Into The Dark

I saw something dark her eyes. She stared at me, I stared back. Somehow her blue eyes had deepened to a dark ebony. I knew something was wrong. I had sensed the change. I wanted to run. I needed to. But my feet seemed to be glued to the ground. The color had completely faded from my face, but so had hers. So much it looked as if it had turned grey. You could see the outline of her cheekbones, the bulge of her eyes. It seemed impossible, but it wasn't. She had become a totally different person. _But how? _

I didn't have much time to think. She lunged at me. I felt a pain shoot through the right side of my neck. I heard myself scream.

The world became blurry. I saw the color return to her face, her skin smoothed out. Making her appear look lessâ€¦._dead. _She gasped, and held a hand to her mouth. One..two..three.. now four of her were running towards me. My eyes drooped. Was this a dream? I hoped so. I felt her hand squeeze my right shoulder, trying to brace me. She was talking, yelling at me but it all came out in a whisper. My body swayed, she retained her grip. It all went black.
